Silver Creek Drainage District

Firebaugh Canal Water District and the Silver Creek Drainage District have overlapping boundaries.

Employing the same board members to serve on Silver Creek is likely to raise a government code 1099 “incompatible office” issue. We believe this is a significant issue, said Dean Stuckenschmidt of the County Counsel’s Office.

If this problem is spotted by any person, it could result in litigation. If the 1099 prohibition is proven, then a board member must resign the seat of the board he sat on longer.

Second, there are legal aspects – a potential conflict of interest - because the drainage district exists to solve drainage problems. It raises the question about where FCWD pumps water to drain it.

FCWD has generally the same geographical area as Silver Creek and there is drainage litigation (codefendants with CCID) against the federal government. District General Manager Jeff Bryant says the drainage issues are different from the type that Silver Creek would oversee.

FCWD has an interest in drainage issues and covers the same geographical area as the drainage district it seeks to reactivate.

They can’t serve on both boards without potential divided loyalties, Mr. Stuckenschmidt said.

If this was a lighting district, Mr. Stuckenschmidt said, compatibility would not be an issue since the agencies do very different things.

Conclusion: Use different people for the Silver Creek board. For Silver Creek, that would mean at least three other property owners or owner trustees to serve.

Firebaugh Resource Conservation District

The “incompatible office” issue also could be raised with reactivation of the Firebaugh RCD since the Firebaugh Canal Water District takes on many similar roles because the agency assists land owners in water conservation and water distribution. The boundaries, although larger for the Conservation District, overlap FCWD.

Mr. Stuckenschmidt says: 1) All three districts have overlapping services. 2) All three districts have overlapping boundaries. 3) All three districts are essentially undertaking the same, or similar, duties. 4) All three have an incompatibility issue.

Conclusion: Silver Creek and the RCD also have overlapping missions and boundaries. If the two districts were to reactivate, each would need at least three board members. Silver Creek would be comprised of land owners or land owner trustees. The RCD can be comprised of any registered voter in the district with an interest in water and soil conservation. This means at least six different board members, three for each district.

Upcoming: LAFCO meeting is August 14, 2019. SB-448 allows the LAFCO commission to consider this matter.
